

The Owl and the Pussycat!

I hope you have enjoyed reading The Owl and the Pussycat this week. I wonder how much you can remember off by heart? I am trying to learn it all too.

We will be reading some more nonsense poems written by Edward Lear and meeting some fantastic characters that he created.

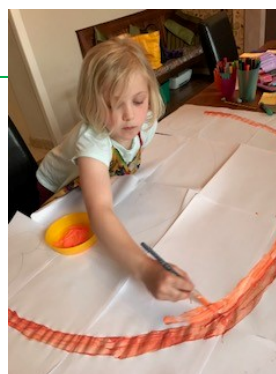

Well done to everyone who has been reading their Bug Club books. I am keeping an eye on your progress to make sure you have more books allocated when you need them.

If you have any news you want me to share with the rest of the class, please ask an adult to email it to me and I will add it to the next edition of OWL NEWS.

Help the NHS

When I go on my daily walk or run, I see some amazing rainbows. Have you all been making rainbows for your windows? I have tried to paint a rainbow on a stone for my garden wall. What great rainbow ideas have you had?

Mollie sent pictures of her creating a huge rainbow for the farm gates. She wanted everyone to see it. It is beautiful, Thank you Mollie.

Angus and the Ants

Angus had this Ant Set for Christmas. Angus and Joni have collected ants from the garden and have enjoyed watching them in their dining room window. Angus said 'It's been interesting seeing them - they are certainly very busy! We have found out that ants like being warm but don't like direct sun so we make sure that they are in shade if it's sunny. We have to give them food and water once a week. they like eating most fruits, we have fed them with apple and banana and they have also had cucumber. They don't need very much though - a piece of fruit the size of a full stop would feed a whole colony of ants for a week!' Oh yes—and Angus has lost a tooth too!

When they had a heifer dehorned, Jenny told everyone "You can make windows out of cow horn. I learnt that at Ford Green Hall."

Jenny's mum had no idea that you could do this. Well done Jenny for amazing everyone with this brilliant fact. I hope you can keep the cow horn so that we can see it when we get back to school.

Jenny's surprising fact.

Teeth: You all seem to be keeping the Tooth Fairy busy, that is 4 teeth lost since you started learning from home. I wonder who will lose a tooth next?

Alex exploring the earth

Alex has found the biggest map to complete his geography task on this week. That is an amazing map! Alex has also been out for his daily exercise bike rides and learning about the Secret Bunker in Liverpool. I hope you can share some facts with us when we are in school Alex!

Another person who is enjoying geography is Lauren who is well on her way making a papier mache globe. I really like the owl apron too.

Lauren loving the planet

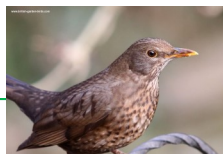

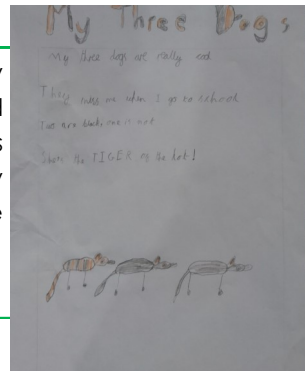

Perse's picture perfection

As well as working on her spelling and maths, Perse has been able to perfect her artistic skills to create this brilliant picture. The details are excellent Perse, Well done.

Bryn's brilliant poem.

I think Bryn has been inspired by The Owl and the Pussycat and has written a poem about his dogs. He has also written a story about aliens that I can see becoming a novel very soon.

A blackbird (called Betty) has built a nest just outside my dining room, in the wood store. She is so close to the house that when I have my tea, she sits and watches me eating. Hopefully I will be able to see when her chicks hatch and make sure they make it safely out of the nest when they fledge.

Huw lives the Good Life

I will be asking Huw for bread making lessons when I see him again, as he has been busy baking and it looks delicious. With his brother, he has also been getting ready to grow his food crops. I am really excited about Mr Bump squashes and I might have to try growing those myself. I can't wait to see the results.

And finally....Megan has broken her ankle! Her mum said that she is doing well, but has to hop everywhere. Oh no Megan, we hope that you are feeling okay and that you get better very soon.
